Private Willie Bell, stationed at Camp Millard, Bucyrus, Ohio, chose the right way of obtaining return of a treasured leather shaving kit which he had left in the automobile of a Fayette County woman who had taken him into her car while he was hitch hiking to his home in Birmingham, Alabama, recently.

Bell did not miss the kit until he had left this city, riding with someone else headed south.

Two days ago he wrote from Bucyrus to the police department here, asking if his kit had been left at police headquarters, or if anyone had called about it. The kit was a present and which he valued very highly.

In the meantime, Mrs. Ruby Fountain, of Good Hope, had notified the police that she had given a soldier a lift and a leather shaving kit had been left in the car.

Captain Jess Ellis, upon receiving the letter, notified Mrs. Fountain, who mailed the kit Thursday.

A certain White Rock hen owned by Mrs. George Burke, Jr., residing on the Creek Road two miles south of Washington C. H., is trying her best to help provide food during the present emergency.

To prove this she laid an egg that weighs more than a quarter of a pound and has a waist measurement of just seven inches.

Another Fayette County soldier who is in North Africa, Walter Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson of this city, has been enjoying some Fayette County canned goods, and is sending a label from one of the cans, back to his mother.

Walter wrote that he had been eating "Sunrise" tomatoes, packed by the Fayette Canning Company, as part of his diet in North Africa.

It is the second instance where Fayette County canned goods have been used in North Africa by a resident of the county who is with the U. S. armed forces there.

Incidentally, I recall that some of our soldiers in the first World War ate canned goods packed in Washington C. H., so it is just a case of "history repeating itself."

IN HOG MARKETING

Packing Houses, Unable To Handle Work, 'Tis Said

CHICAGO, July 1.—(P)—Members of the hog production and marketing sections of the Advisory committee to the War Meat Board, meeting with the War Meat Board yesterday, "commanded and endorsed" the War Meat Board for requesting and advising hog producers to retard their shipments of hogs to market.

The committee was "fully in accord" with suggestions that hogs should be held on farms and shipped into market in an "orderly way," a war food administration release stated, "in order to give processors a chance to clear the bottlenecks which have developed in the packing industry."

It was the opinion of advisory committee members that "the only reason for the recent decline in hog prices has been the inability of packers to slaughter hogs, due to the labor shortage and inadequacy of refrigerating facilities."

BIS FUGITIVE KILLED

WHEN SHOT BY POLICE

CLEVELAND, July 1.—(P)—Frank Maslaynak, 16-year-old fugitive from the Boys' Industrial School at Lancaster, was shot and killed by Detective Sergeant James J. McDonald last night. The officer said Maslaynak fled when he tried to question him and refused to obey an order to halt. Maslaynak left Lancaster last April to attend the funeral of an uncle here and never went back, McDonald said.

Mighty Allied Air Force Strikes from Three Sides For New High in June

RUHR VALLEY DEVASTATED

Italy's Invasion Gates Are Blasted and Stepping-stone Islands Surrendered

LONDON, July 1.—(P)—A striking from three directions, the mighty air arms of the American and British Allied subjected Axis Europe to a design of destruction unparalleled in all history during the month of June, and for the enemy the worst still was to come.

During the month, Allied aerial power reached out in rising fury from bases in Britain, in north-west Africa and in the middle east—with American and British fliers cooperating smoothly to keep the offensive going virtually around the clock.

These accomplishments stood out:

1. The unconditional surrender of the Italian Fortress Island of Pantelleria on June 11, first island ever conquered by air power alone; the subsequent capitulation of Lampedusa, Linosa and Lampione, and the pattern of destruction spread over Italy, Sicily and Sardinia.

2. The great destruction wrought by the RAF in its city-by-city bombing of the Ruhr valley, to whose concentrated industries Hitler looks for replenishment of his war machine.

Also significant were the two American Liberator raids last week on Axis airfields near Athens and Salonika, an aerial pointer toward a possible Balkan invasion route, and inauguration by the RAF of a bombing shuttle service between Britain and Africa with an important raid on both the outbound and homeward trips.

NEW YORK, July 1.—(P)—Potatoes, rare as imported champagne in New York a few weeks ago, threatened today to become drugs on the local market.

An over-supply drove prices below ceilings and resulted in an official pronouncement urging their purchase and consumption.

The greatest sufferer was the wholesaler, who saw the price of U. S. No. 1 potatoes sell yesterday for $3.25 a hundred-weight when the price ceiling was $3.72.

Enemy Desperate and May Make Suicide Raids To Break Morale

WASHINGTON, July 1.—(P)—A vigorous warning that the United States might be subjected to aerial bombing by the Axis enemy this summer was voiced here today.

D. C. Speaker, the mythical District of Columbia spokesman who, however, frequently represents authoritative sources who will not be quoted by name, said: "No major military damage could be inflicted by such raids, but the Axis could well be counting on utilizing such raids to create a frantic defensive psychology within this country in an effort to compel the Allied command to pull back its strength to the home front to satisfy public clamor."

"If they succeed in any such plan, it would prolong the war indefinitely and result in an enormous waste of life."

PITTSBURGH, July 1.—(P)—More thousands of hard coal miners returned to the pits today in eastern Pennsylvania and a couple thousand more soft coal workers returned in Alabama, reducing the number of idle in the nation's mines to roughly around 104,000.

The number idle yesterday had been unofficially estimated at 130,000.

Last night Secretary Ickes, fuel administrator, in charge of the mines now under government control, appealed to coal miners everywhere not to stay away from their jobs "on the eve of the greatest military campaign in history."

Crop Insurance Program Is Again in Danger—Senate In Investigating Mood

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON, July 1.—(P)—This greatest war-spending government of all time embarked today on a fiscal year in which it will lay out the unprecedented sum of $109,000,000,000, yet a disagreement in Congress left many war agencies temporarily broke.

Start of the new fiscal year coincided with the inauguration of pay-as-you-go income tax collections.

A log jam of money bills in Congress left President Roosevelt without a nickel of emergency funds today for the first time in three years and forced many war agencies to operate temporarily on the cuff.

Although both Senate and House were agreed that the executive should start off the new fiscal year with at least $89,000,000 for emergency purposes, a deadlock over withholding salaries of three federal workers blocked passage of a bill making the sum available. The measure was one of half a dozen major bills left stranded when Congress adjourned overnight after a futile attempt to shove them through before the 1942-43 fiscal year ended at midnight. The only bill cleared was a $71,500,000 win-the-war army supply measure.

Tied up in the other legislation were 1944 funds for the departments of agriculture and interior, the Federal Security Agency and a group of other departments including the Office of Price Administration, the Office of War Information and the War Production Board.

Except for the urgent deficiency bill carrying the president's money, all the other measures have provisions validating any obligation incurred after June 30 provided the obligation was in accordance with limitations in each bill.

Major differences holding up passage of the other measures were:

Agriculture Department ($875,000,000)—House insistence on discontinuance of the government crop insurance program; the Senate wants to continue it.

War agencies ($2,931,000,000)—The House voted to discontinue the domestic operations branch of OWI and cut out its entire $5,500,000 fund, and the Senate gave it $3,561,499; the House whacked $35,000,000 from the OPA budget and the Senate restored the cut and voted additional funds. House leaders also are balking at a Senate amendment banning the pay of any official paid $4,500 or more annually who has not been confirmed by the Senate.

Labor—Federal Security ($1,200,000,000)—The House ordered liquidation of the National Youth Administration (NYA), while the Senate voted the agency $48,800,000.

Interior Department—Increases of $55,027,825 voted by the Senate over House allotments, most of the new money being for western irrigation projects.

The Senate seemed to be in an investigating mood. A five-man delegation prepared to take off on a world tour of battlefronts with Chairman Russell (D-Ga.) disclosing a resolve to avoid handing out armchair advice to U. S. generals on the scene.

Killer of Girl Put To Death in Ohio Penitentiary

After protesting his innocence in a note sent to Warden Frank D. Henderson less than two hours before he was electrocuted, Treat entered the death chamber at 8:53 P. M. and was pronounced dead 18 minutes later.

Before being strapped in the chair, the slightly-built painter shook hands with Guard C. C. Saltmarsh, saying "I hope to meet my mother and son," then asked to meet the warden.

Grasping Henderson's hand, Treat thanked him for the last dinner he had eaten, asked permission to "say a blessing," then knelt in prayer facing the chair.

One American Ship Sunk in Fierce Battle But No Loss of Life Reported

LANDING MADE UNDER FIRE

Yank Fliers Down 65 Jap Planes While Losing 17 in Launching New Offense

By ROGER GREENE

(By The Associated Press)

American troops have captured Viru Harbor on New Georgia Island after a violent sea-air battle in which at least 65 Japanese planes, 17 U. S. aircraft and one American ship were lost, the navy announced today as Allied forces drove ahead in their sweeping five-point offensive north of Australia.

The navy said Japanese torpedo planes hit and disabled the 7,712-ton American transport McCawley, formerly the Grace Line's Santa Barbara, after troops from the ship had been put ashore.

"Reports indicate that all personnel were removed and that there was no loss of life," a navy bulletin said.

The McCawley was sunk later by an enemy submarine.

Capture of Viru Harbor put the Americans within about 40 miles of the Japanese air base at Munda, New Georgia. Viru Village had been used as a Japanese outpost for Munda.

Furious Japanese aerial resistance was encountered as U. S. sea-borne forces landed from naval transports on nearby Rendova Island, five miles south of Munda, with the enemy throwing an estimated 110 planes—fighters, dive bombers and many other types—into the assault.

Incomplete reports showed that 65 of the Japanese aircraft were blasted out of the skies.

Viru Harbor fell to the U. S. landing forces yesterday (today, Solomon Islands Time), the navy said.

Meanwhile, War Secretary Stimson declared in Washington that "our forces have reached the outer defenses of Japan and strong enemy reaction may be expected," as the offensive rolled forward from two main directions—in the Solomons and in New Guinea.

"Reports are incomplete but satisfactory progress apparently has already been made," Stimson said.

The offensive, he added, is proceeding on schedule.

Informed Washington quarters predicted that the drive, launched Tuesday morning (Wednesday morning, Solomon Islands time) would touch off a momentous new sea battle.

"All elements—ground, naval and air—are being employed in closest synchronization," said a bulletin from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters.

Striking on a 750-mile arc, American and Allied forces landed on Rendova and New Georgia islands in the central Solomons, seized Tobriand and Woolark islands off the southeast tip of New Guinea without a struggle, and stormed ashore at Nassau Bay in northeast New Guinea.

Dispatches said the landing forces at Nassau Bay, just below the big Japanese base at Salamaua, moved swiftly inland "and are in contact with the enemy."

Fighting also was believed in progress on Rendova and New Georgia islands.

It represented activation of a master plan drawn in April at close guarded conferences between General MacArthur and Admiral William F. Halsey whereby their respective southwest and south Pacific commands would be merged, with MacArthur directing, for any combined operations.

"The New Guinea blows were struck by troops from the Southwest Pacific under immediate command of the American gen-

CLOSE OUT SALE TO MARK START OF EXPANSION

Murphy Co. Store To Be Enlarged and Wade To Open New Shoe Store

The final and closing out sale of the Wade and Boyd Shoe Store stock Friday and Saturday, paradoxically marks a double beginning rather than an ending.

The complete stock of shoes in the Wade and Boyd store, which a representative of the Murphy Co. described as the "largest and finest" he had ever seen in a city of the size of Washington C. H., is to be cleaned out over the week end so that workmen can set about cutting the arches and remodeling the room Tuesday, as the beginning of a long range expansion program mapped out for the store.

William Humphries, manager of the Murphy Store, said that while the store here handled shoes, the new room would be only a part of the main store and not set aside for shoes alone.

Wade to Open New Store
As the day for the closing out sale approached, Otho O. Wade, proprietor of the Wade and Boyd store, revealed for the first time that he plans to reopen his store in the Court Street room, just three doors east of Fayette Street, which was vacated by the Victory Confectionery about a year ago. Although he declined to go into details about the fixtures and remodeling "at this time" he said work had been started about two weeks ago. He declared that wartime uncertainties made it impossible to say when the job would be completed or when the store would be opened.

Wade sold out his store, stock and all, to the Murphy Co. a few weeks ago and agreed to remain until the stock was disposed of. Until this is done, he said, he was giving little attention to the problems of getting back into business himself.

Expansion Program Begun
The addition of the old Wade and Boyd store—about 20 feet wide and more than 60 feet in depth, will add about 25 percent to the floor space of the Murphy Co. store, Humphries estimated. Continuing, he declared even this expansion would not be sufficient to handle all of the departments and merchandise his company had to offer and intimated this was only the first step in a long range program under consideration by the Murphy Co. for Washington C. H. He added, however, that little was likely to be done about that until after the war had been won.

The new room is to be connected with the present Murphy store by two big archways. The partition which cut the Wade and Boyd store room just about in the middle, leaving the front half for the sales room and the rear half for the reserve stocks, is to be taken out.

Humphries and Wade declared that "the bottom has been cut from the prices of the shoes for the closing out sale because it was imperative that work be started on remodeling."

We Stand Squarely for the Best Interest of the Citizens of Washington C. H. and Fayette County.

DESERVE SYMPATHY

During these days of worry over taxes, vastly increased number of government reports to be made out, "points" for rationing and many other things, we believe the people most in need of sympathy are the so-called "white collar workers."

We've all heard many references to the "forgotten man" and there is no difficulty in distinguishing this "underdog" in American life today. Yes, he is the white-collar man or woman, working on salary or weekly wages as clerk, salesman, small business man, bookkeeper, stenographer or solicitor.

The tax laws which have been designed, or will shortly be adopted, to force out of the hands of millions of "flush" war workers much of their surplus earnings in order to prevent undue pressure on the supply of consumer goods, must fall with crushing weight upon the man whose income has not increased, but, in terms of purchasing power, actually has steadily decreased as the cost of living has mounted.

If 50 percent of his income is to be taken from him, as is reported as contemplated, he will be in serious straits. The war worker, receiving higher pay than he dreamed of, in most cases, and a wage that no country has ever before approached, will not be gravely affected. He will be deprived only of a surplus above and beyond his normal earnings. But the white-collar man will see the old pay envelope, the pay envelope of pre-war days, cut in two, and will feel sharply the reduction in the amount of money he will have to spend. He is the man who will have to undergo real hardship. He is unorganized. He has no means of making himself heard at Washington. Largely he is ignored, actually forgotten. He is the underdog of this war. Congress and the administration snub him. He is being squeezed between the upper and nether millstones.

NEED CAREFUL WATCHING

The Zoot-suit riots did not sound important at first. But they have brought to light a condition which needs attention not only in and around Los Angeles, where most of the offenders seem to have been Mexicans, only half-assimilated into American life, but in every city and town in the country.

The recent riots in Detroit presents another angle of this spirit of unrest which is not to be disregarded or lightly considered.

Every war brings riots of one sort and another. There is a general restlessness and strain in the very air. People of poise and control stand in without much outward show of trouble. They work a little harder, or pray a little more, or maybe just gripe a little extra to let off steam. But they do their daily tasks and go on from there. To people of less discipline the uncertainties and maladjustments of war bring explosions.

One group of little or no balance is that of the drug addicts. The attention of a community, including its police forces, may be distracted by new war duties

Help Yourself, Girls

KANSAS CITY, Kas.—It's the custom at North American's bomber plant for a fellow to pass cigars to the men and candy to the women in the plant when he gets married. C. F. Perrey passed the cigars but couldn't find any candy. So he just passed around a box of nickels for the women. They can buy their candy if and where they can come across some.

Hints on Etiquette

Everyone's nerves are raw at some point these days. Remember this, and if some one speaks sharply to you, smile and speak softly. The soft word will be like "oil on troubled waters."

Words of Wisdom

We should give as we would receive, cheerfully, quickly, and without hesitation; for there is no grace in a benefit that sticks to the fingers.—Seneca.

Today's Horoscope

Poetry, art, music and travel are your chief outside interests, if your birthday is today. Try to be more forceful, more self-confident, lest you fail to achieve the success that is your birthright. You have a strong circle of friends. Think seriously about studying public speaking or another subject this morning that will increase your popularity. This will enable you to have more satisfactory social contacts. Figure out how to increase your efficiency so it can pay you a higher income. Manage your own burdens without dumping them on someone else. Don't complain if things are confused. The mixup is purely mental.

It doesn't do to take attention from these matters. They are dangerous enough in the best of times, and with war and easy money floating around they become a serious menace. The Zoot-suit crimes and Detroit disorders sound like those performed by marijuana addicts.

POSTWAR PRODUCTS

That improvements in industrial products will come out of this war is inevitable. However, it would be folly for us to delude ourselves into believing that radical dream-products will become realities immediately after the hostilities cease.

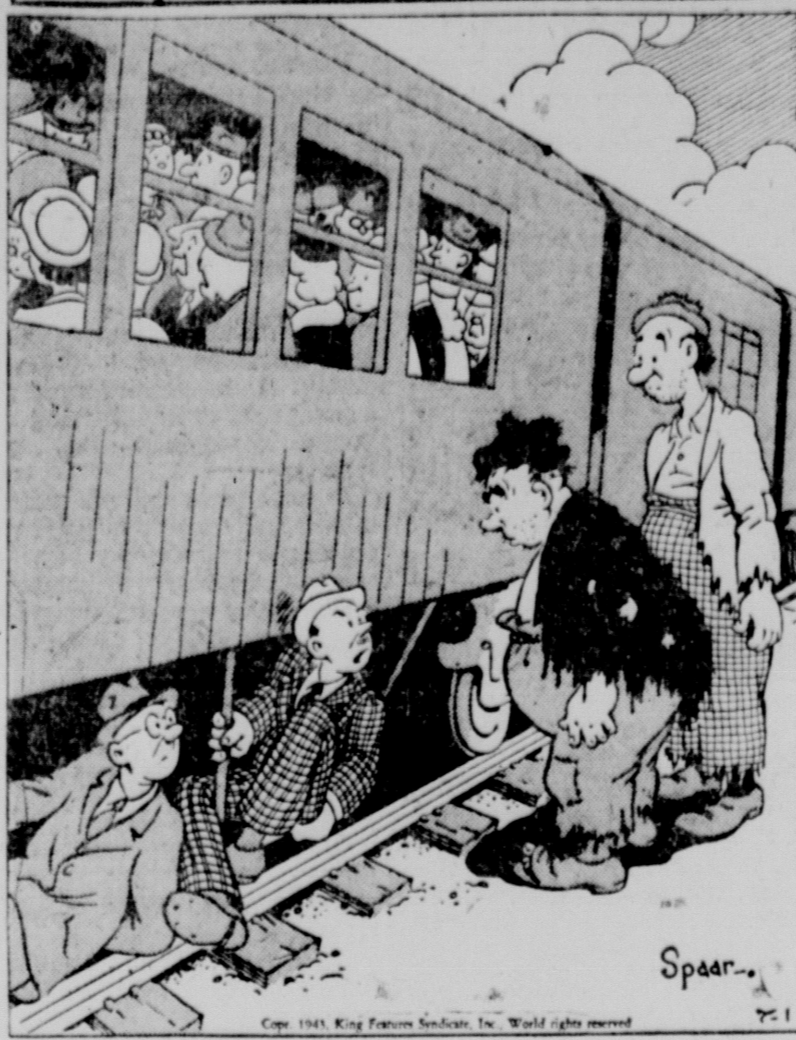

As was pointed out by one prominent industrial leader, it would be a year, two years, and in some cases five years after the war before the housewife should expect to reap the profits of proven scientific advance.

Although we will undoubtedly see minor improvements immediately in some products, this leader pointed out, industry will get into production quickly when the war ends, "not only to serve a pent-up demand but, equally important, to maintain high employment. To do this means using tools, machines, materials, and 'know-how' that are in existence from pre-war days."

In the meantime, we can rest assured that inventions are progressing at unheard-of paces, and that we shall reap the benefits in as little time as possible.

It looks as if, pretty soon, everybody will be rushing around like you-know-what, in a helicopter.

Mind's Role in Illness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

YESTERDAY we discussed briefly a new department of modern medicine called psychosomatic medicine. It can hardly be called a specialty because it applies to nearly every patient. The very name indicates that the physician should study the personality, mind and soul of the patient, as well as his physical health.

There are very few diseases in which the mind of the patient plays no part whatever in the symptoms of the disease. Perhaps an acute disease like measles or pneumonia may be regarded purely from the physical standpoint and treated with that in view, but in general the old maxims to the effect that "What the patient thinks about his disease may be almost as important as the disease itself" and "We want to know first what kind of disease the patient has and what kind of patient this disease has."

Help Patient's Outlook

The importance of this viewpoint is that the physician can always do something about the patient's opinion of his disease and outlook on life even if he can do little or nothing about the disease itself. In looking over a recent textbook on psychosomatic medicine I find that it has chapters on diseases of every system in the body—the heart, the digestive system, the endocrine system, the lungs.

Our mental habits are fixed in childhood and it is not surprising to find the following statement in this book on psychosomatic medicine: "Most of the feeding problems in infancy are of emotional origin." That may come as a surprise to some people but not to an old family physician. Even in childhood remember that the digestive system is more than any other part of the body disturbed by unpleasant emotional stimuli.

Tantrums in childhood may lead to a habit of mind which is disturbing to happiness in later life in many ways. The tantrums may turn into something that looks like an organic disease. Many a chronic dyspeptic who comforts himself with the idea that his stomach is "weak" and that he has ulcer is often an example of tantrums which have become fixed in the digestive system.

Our personalities slop over and influence not only members of our household, but nearly all our possessions. As Eben Holden said of the man and his horse, "Got 't judge the owner as well as the horse, and if there's anything the matter with his conscience it'll come out in the horse somewhere." The same thing is true of parents and children.

Effect of Experiences

Experiences later in life also tend to steer a person either towards a state of semi-invalidism or away from it. A person who has had a healthy, happy childhood under the direction of wise parents with carefully supervised nutrition, who finds success in adult life is unlikely to drift into any functional illness, either psychic or somatic.

On the other hand, even with the best and healthiest childhood, a business reverse, an unhappy love affair, a series of unsuccessful marriages, any of the larger experiences in emotional life can turn even a naturally cheerful and healthy person into a brooder and a self-doubter, which emotional state may be presented to the world in the form of some functional disturbance such as dyspepsia, blood pressure upsets, neuralgia or headaches—all of which come within the field of psychosomatic medicine.

What do you want me to do tomorrow?" He was puzzled, then reluctantly came out of his dreaming. "Oh, yes—the job." His plan of action flashed into words, and she saw with growing apprehension the thought and detail in the

CHAPTER FORTY-TWO

AS JEAN broke free from Curley's embrace to see the dutifully waiting police official behind them, chimes from the village church sounded the hour.

"Midnight," Curley's voice murmured just behind her with humorous significance.

For an instant her words choked in her throat. Wildly she thought of the train she could still catch with this officer's help. Escape to the city—back to a sheltered life, a successful career . . . knowing, her mind added relentlessly, that she had failed in her big chance—failed Melvin—her country—hundreds of soldiers whose lives would eventually be forfeit because she wasn't strong enough to break a sabotage gang by turning in one worthless man! Her hands were icy, but she had control of herself again.

"I—have changed my mind. I won't be going away on the train," she said in a low voice. She smiled bitterly as Curley slipped the puzzled officer a wink and a bill. If the arrogant saboteur only knew he was buying his own doom!

Curley followed her down the path beside the lighted cabaret to the Fordango, helped her in, and then went around to climb over his door and slide under the wheel in the dexterous motion she had once loved. He leaned over to cup her chin in his hand.

"You'll never be sorry, beautiful. I promise you."

"No, I don't think I will," she said, hidden irony in her whispered voice.

He bent to kiss her with a tender, lingering pressure of his strong lips. Then, with a whoop of exuberance, he started the Fordango.

It was a strange journey, that two-hour rattling, jolting ride back through the starlit Mexican night, back to Santa Carlos. Between songs, Curley told her how he'd loved her at sight the first night he'd serenaded her when she'd appeared in her casement window looking like a silver angel. He pulled her close within the circle of his arm and confided wild dreams of his boyhood; crazy, wonderful plans for their life together; his love for her.

Jean wondered how long she could endure the torture. She was weak from the steady, anguished ache in her heart—that heart that still responded heavily, like a blind, stricken thing, to the reckless gaiety of his love making. She broke into his fabulous honeymoon plans desperately.

"What do you want me to do tomorrow?" He was puzzled, then reluctantly came out of his dreaming. "Oh, yes—the job." His plan of action flashed into words, and she saw with growing apprehension the thought and detail in the scheme to gain possession of the precious rubber formula. She was to go back to her job tomorrow, using some "patriotic guff" of changing her mind about leaving war work. Then, a few nights hence, when everything was set—Her hands clenched in pain at the arrogance of his voice as he exposed the plans. This was the man she had defended so passionately! This the shallow, cruel nature in which she had hoped to find a strain of nobility! Well, her blind heart was being punished. Life was challenging her to make good her stubborn error.

It was this thought that sustained her through his tenderly passionate good night kiss, that sent her in to awaken the bewildered landlady, receive her key and make her way alone up to her familiar little room. The phone was on the wall. She locked her door and hurried across to it. Fortunately it hadn't yet been disconnected. A sleepy central answered. In a quiet, dead voice, Jean gave her Steve Landis' number.

It had been a strange, troubled evening at the Rancho Casolina. Miguel had brought the word at the dinner of the Senorita Marsden's leaving. Mr. Parkinson had glanced irritably at Curley's shocked face. Mrs. Parkinson's hand paused in pouring coffee.

"What a shame," she murmured. Rosita thought differently. When the meal was over, she flew to her room to slip into her daintiest embroidered blouse, her gayest skirt, her brightest, clinking bracelets, and beloved red spike-heeled slippers. As she pinned a rose into the masses of her black hair, she smiled at her reflection joyously. She would make Curley forget the American girl!

But Curley was not to be found. She wandered through the lighted hacienda, at first languorously, expecting him in every room, then with growing apprehension. She ran out at last through the cool dusk to the garage. Hopelessness welled suddenly within her. The garage was empty. The Fordango was gone!

Frantically she searched the stables, then the hacienda for Miguel. No one had seen him. In last desperation, she ran into the library. It was empty. She crossed to the picture of her mother and, without hesitation, reached to press heavily on the center flower in her mother's bouquet. The picture swung noiselessly outward, revealing a passageway. The girl hurried into this, descended a steep stairway and entered a spacious dungeon compartment.

Parkinson, standing with three men, before the magnificent machine he had warned her to keep silent about, whirled nervously.

"I want Miguel!" she cried impetuously. "I must have him at once. Do you know where he is?"

"What do you want him for?"

Parkinson's voice was cold steel. Rosita threw back her head with a twinkling smile. "We will drive in the auto after Curley," she confided. "We will bring him back!"

"Go to your room!" Parkinson's voice was sharp. "Don't come out of it until I tell you to. Do you hear me?"

The girl started at him in stunned wonder. Never had she in all her petted, sheltered life, been spoken to like this. She stiffened, though her full, delicate lips trembled. "I—I want—Miguel," she stated.

Parkinson, with an exclamation of fury, grabbed her arm. A few minutes later he arrived with the struggling girl at his wife's door.

"I told you," he said bitterly as he kicked the door shut behind them, "we'd have trouble with her! And of all nights!"

Mrs. Parkinson was changing from her long housecoat into a wool sport suit. She pulled its blue wool smartness over her head and adjusted it with quick fingers, then straightened her hair.

"Are you going to be a good girl and go to bed?" Her hazel eyes fixed on the girl's face, but her hypnotic calm did not quiet Rosita. Instead, fright came into her face—a chilling, puzzled fright. Her breath, held for a minute, came forth in a loud shriek.

"No! No! I'm going away! I'm going away and I'll never come back here!"

Mrs. Parkinson came closer. Her voice was soothing, her laugh gentle. "I'll put you to bed, Rosita. You're tired. You shall have one of those nice white pills to make you sleep."

Her tenderness was wasted. Rosita shrieked louder, and tore out of Mrs. Parkinson's grasp. "I don't want to go to bed! I will go away with Miguel. I hate you. I hate you. I will tell how you—you buy my father's house from me when I don't wish to sell. I will tell how you hide men in my mother's secret room. I will—"

Her screams were hushed by Parkinson's hand across her mouth, her beating fists pinned to her sides by his arm.

"She'll have all the servants here in a minute." His angry gaze rested accusingly on his wife. Mrs. Parkinson stood for a moment, thoughtfully regarding the struggling Mexican girl. Then slowly she shrugged. She drew a wide band of adhesive from her bed table drawer and a pair of scissors and brought them over.

"It's just as well they heard her scream," she murmured as Parkinson whipped the adhesive across Rosita's mouth. "They'll know she is in one of her tantrums. But wait," she added sternly as she helped him tie the girl's

MIMIC BATTLE IS STAGED AT VFW CARNIVAL

Unique Sideshow Recalls Days When Sponsors Fought for Liberty

One of the main attractions that is drawing its share of the fun-seekers who nightly have been packing the Old Fairground on Columbus Avenue for the Jubilee Carnival sponsored by the O. E. Hardway Post of Veterans of Foreign Wars is through the entrance under the banner of Miller's Mechanical Battlefield.

Synchronized with the times of war, the "battlefield" appears as if teeming with life as the 500 miniature men, standing 3½ inches tall and dressed in uniforms of embattled countries, maneuver in mimic combat. The show is both unique and timely, and a mechanical wonder. There are nearly 7,000 tiny castings to show the guns and armies in action motivated by intricate timing devices. The Barker out front describes it as being "in reality the world war returned to us in miniature, being educational and an informational show for adults as well as children."

The show itself is staged with ingenuity to bring back scenes of the first World War. Two armies are in combat on the slopes of two hills above the road through a French village in the valley. There are the frowning forts and the protective trenches, so familiar to the doughboys of a quarter-century ago. There is a prison camp with its prisoners. There are gun repair shops and deserted coal mines. The general and his staff cast critical eyes over the panorama of observation posts, machine gun nests, pill boxes and hospitals, from which stretcher bearers run back and forth.

Many of the VFW who saw service in France during the other war, have taken in the show, the head man on the door said, and added that they said the scene resembled Hill 60 on the Ypres sector and Hill 304 in the Argonne. The night scene over the battlefield takes place every two minutes. It takes about 45 minutes to get the whole show from all sides.

The FWV Jubilee Carnival is made up of a variety of thrill rides, sideshows and concessions. The post gets a percentage of the business which is to go into a fund to send cigarettes to America's World War No. 2 fighting men at battle stations all over the world.

Vacation Driving May Cost Gasoline Rations

FRIENDLY TIP GIVEN BY HEAD OF BOARD HERE

Letter from OPA Clarifies Misunderstandings on Use of Automobiles

If you are planning to drive your car somewhere for a vacation—even a little trip during the Fourth of July week-end—you had better change your plans now or get ready to take the consequences.

That, in effect, was the friendly tip from the chairman of Fayette County's Ration Board to motorists, no matter what kind of gasoline ration books they hold.

W. L. O'Brien, the board chairman, declared, as he made public a letter from the Columbus office of the OPA, that "I want the people here to know in advance that there is positively nothing the board can do to change the situation and that there will be no special favors."

He added that "it's only fair that they (automobile owners) know what the situation is, then if they get into trouble and we get orders to revoke their ration books, they will have nobody but themselves to blame."

He emphasized that "this board is not an enforcement agency and has no intention of policing the highways or resorts" but he pointed out that the OPA has clamped down on non-essential driving and, in many cases of violation, ordered ration books surrendered. When instructions come from the OPA to the board here, the chairman said, there will be nothing to do but "lift" the books.

As he laid down a letter from the district OPA office—a letter, incidentally, which he had asked for—because of numerous requests for "vacation rations," O'Brien declared:

"It will be well for residents of Fayette County to give this letter plenty of thought as violation of regulations will bring revocation of gasoline ration books regardless of occupation or profession, according to orders from the Columbus office of the OPA."

The letter follows:

"Our Washington Office has announced that no gasoline will be granted upon a special application for use in vacation travel. Both the rubber situation and the gasoline shortage is such that any other decision might well have meant a complete breakdown of our essential transportation in Ohio."

"This immediately raises the question as to how much driving can be done by a vacationer upon the gasoline already allotted to him. In reply we would state that anyone holding a B or C ration book cannot use any of this ration for vacation travel. As you already know, the issuance of a B or C ration to an applicant means that 150 miles per month of driving as allotted by his basic A ration immediately becomes occupational driving and only 90 miles are left for personal driving, such as trips to the store, to the Doctor, or to church."

Therefore, as the regulations are now constituted no supplemental ration holder has mileage that can be used for vacation travel, except that which he might have, if the 90 miles left to him for personal driving in his Basic A book has not been used for other personal travel.

"This office has been asked on many occasions whether an automobile owner can obtain vacation driving by saving his occupational ration by using alternative means of transportation or whether he can use the occupational mileage saved during the period he does not go to work, in vacation driving. In both cases the answer is that such mileage having been granted for occupational use only cannot be so used and must be returned to the local board at the time the next supplemental ration is issued."

By way of explanation, the board chairman said that when at the last OPA meeting in the late capital he learned that the tightening up on driving was due to what he said was a "serious situation" concerning rubber. His impressions were along the same lines as the statements from the head of the rubber program—that there would not be enough tires for more than essential civilian driving before the synthetic rubber output reached a considerably greater volume than at present. He said, expressing his personal views, that the conservation would have to continue at least until well into next year.

Don't spend your pay in competition with your neighbors for scarce civilian goods. Save, America, and you will save America from black markets and runaway inflation. Buy more Bonds every payday. How many bonds? Figure it out yourself.

BEHIND THE SCENES—Paramount Pictures commemorates its own thirtieth birthday and Cecil B. DeMille's thirty years as a producer and director, with the release of the great screen showman's Technicolor production, "Reap the Wild Wind," which premieres locally Sunday at the State Theatre. Mixing adventure and romance, the charm of the old South and the terror of hurricane-whipped seas, "Reap the Wild Wind" tells a story that moves from Picturesque Charleston salons to tall-masted sailing ships piled up on treacherous reefs, and piratical salvagers threatening America's freedom of the seas. Above, DeMille is shown directing Ray Milland, Paulette Goddard and John Wayne in an exciting "Reap the Wild Wind" scene. Inset shows the three stars. Featured are Raymond Massey, Lynne Overmann, Robert Preston, Susan Hayward, and many others.

Danville News

July 4, is our Independence Day, a day that will have greater meaning this year than ever before. In the years past we have just taken this day for granted. But this year we realize its full meaning, for the enemy is threatening our independence, that we fought so hard to gain.

We think of the war that was fought to gain independence, of the hardships, sickness and death, but we were victorious.

And then the other wars since that have been fought to preserve it, and each time we won.

Now we are in another war, for the same reason. But we are not doubtful as to the outcome of this struggle. There will be hardships, self-denial and yes, death, too. But we will win.

As the years pass in the future, Old Glory will still wave in the breeze each Independence Day. And we will lift our hearts to God in prayer, and give thanks for the grandest nation, and the most beautiful flag, on earth.

Tired Kidneys Often Bring Sleepless Nights

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. When they get tired and don't work right in the daytime, many people have to get up nights. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. Don't neglect this condition and lose valuable, restful sleep. When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may also cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

OUTDOOR HIKES ARE ADDED TO YOUTH PROGRAM

Activities at Gardner Park Drawing More Interest Than Had Been Expected

While their older brothers are marching under full packs and in the uniforms of Uncle Sam's fighting forces to toughen them up for the tough jobs ahead, the boys of the city's grade schools who have taken advantage of the community recreation program are taking hikes of their own—but hardly for the same purpose or in the same atmosphere.

Now that the first round of the grade school softball league has been completed, George Miraben, WHS coach and supervisor of the recreation program, has arranged to take the boys out into the country for a few hours a day during the couple of weeks before the second round starts. It is all a part of the plan to give the boys and girls of the community something to do with their spare time during the summer vacation.

Miraben said his plans for the hikes were indefinite and made somewhat on the day-to-day basis. They are to start from the Gardner Park field house, where the program's activities center, and hike from two to six miles. There will be some nature study along the route and, when they arrive at their destination for the day, there will be possibly some outdoor games, and since most of the objectives will be a spot along a creek, there also will be fishing for those who like that and, if the water is right, a bit of swimming.

Plans call for each boy packing a light lunch to be eaten around a camp fire before the return trip.

They will start at around 9 A. M. and return early in the afternoon.

Back at the park, the rest of the afternoon will be devoted to games outdoors there or in the field house.

The recreation program is "coming along even better than we had hoped," Miraben said. Boys and girls have been gathering at the field house at the park early and staying late. There they play games of all kinds under the supervision of Miss Amelia Pensyl and gather in groups. Dancing, with a juke box loaned by Dr. O. W. House, furnishing the music, is popular. The skating rink, to be put on the twin clay courts in the east corner of the park, are nearing completion. The base has been laid and the "black top" surface to be put on by the city will be spread on soon, barring unexpected interruptions.

The recreation program was sponsored by the YM-YW to provide the youngsters of the community with a place to gather and put in their time under competent supervision. It was explained at the outset that the joint board felt that in wartime when parents were busy doing their bit to bring victory at arms such a program was essential as an antidote for the general unrest. City officials endorsed the plan and lent their support to it in the hope that it would serve to check the wave of juvenile delinquency that has swept so many industrial centers.

Back the attack by upping your payroll savings your very next payday. Measure your savings by your new higher income.

What a pleasure it is to have sparkling linens, laundry-fresh and revitalized for longer wear! And you are completely free of wash-day worries so that added time can be spent on war activities when you send your clothes to Mark's laundry.
